COFFEE POT IS EARRING TO SAVAGE KAJA KAJA

The Kaja Kaja savages of New Guinea, who have a reputation for bravery, and are powerfully built, paint their foreheads red or black with white or yellow circles around the eyes. Their nostrils are frequently adorned with the claws of birds of prey or the tusks of wild pigs. From the lobes of their ears the most extraordinary variety of objects may be suspended. M. Neyens describes one warrior who proudly wore an old coffee pot as an ear ornament.

The bodies of the natives are usually tattooed with figures in relief. The tattooing necessitates a painful operation, in which the patient, stretched on the sand, is literally basted with a sharp bamboo instrument, after which the numerous slashes are filled with a sort of clay.

The Kaja Kaja never bathe; instead, the body is rubbed with a variety of oils which give off an insupportable odor, augmented, it may be added, by the decomposing skins which they wear as arm decorations.

NOT EASY TO KILL SOLDIER

Nothing caused the newspaper reader during the war greater surprise than the colossal expenditure of ammunition.

It was agreed that in former wars it took a man's weight in bullets to kill him. In other words, that for every thousand rifle bullets fired away one man was killed.

In the late war, if all metal expended in ammunition were reduced to rifle bullets no fewer than 50,000 would be required to kill a man. Of course, the calculation is rendered difficult by the fact that millions of tons of metal were expended in putting up barbed wire and the like, and in intensive bombardments of the enemy's positions, but it is safe to say that for every man killed in the war about three tons of metal were expended.

Such a calculation is staggering and yet comforting, for if the old average had held good, all the armies engaged in the war, vast though they were, would have been annihilated to the last man.

ICING MILK IN WAGONS SAVES CUSTOMERS AND MONEY

During the hot summer months of the last twenty years, the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has found that icing milk in its delivery wagons has been helpful in retaining customers and saving money that would be lost otherwise through the souring of milk, according to J. W. Nutter, superintendent of the dairy farm. A number of dairymen annually lose many customers and considerable money by failing to observe this practice, he said.

"The total time spent in delivering milk on the average retail route varies from three to eight hours. Milk that is on the road without ice this length of time in the air temperatures that will prevail from now on cannot be expected to keep in good condition. Even where deliveries are made during the cool early morning hours, the temperature of uniced milk will rise considerably before it reaches the customer, in view of the fact that after milk has been on the driver's wagon for three or four hours it often stands on the doorstep for an additional two hours or more.

"The quantity of ice required for a load of milk costs only a few cents while a single bottle of sour milk not only will result in loss of the milk and usually a special delivery, but also may cause the loss of one or more customers. Then, too, if a milk inspector should take a sample from a bottle of milk that has been long uniced on the wagon, his report will be unfavorable.

"When the ordinary open-bottom cases are used and when ice is costly, the top row of cases only need be iced as the cold air will circulate through the cases below. While this will tend to make the floor of the wagon sloppy, it will not be a serious handicap as the floor can be flushed out each day on the return from the route. A few holes bored in the floor of the wagon will allow the melted ice to run through and be a convenience when the floor is washed. These holes can be plugged in the winter time."

PUBLIC LIBRARY RECEIVES IMPORTANT DOCUMENT

The Paris public library is just in receipt of a copy of the biography of former Governor Joseph Duncan, of Illinois, who was born in Paris, February 22, 1794. The book is sent with the compliments of the author, Miss Elizabeth Duncan Putman, of 2023 Brady street, Davenport, Iowa.

The old Duncan home, in which Governor Duncan was born, is still standing within a stone's throw of the Bourbon court house and is in exceptionally fine condition at the present time, being owned by Chas. Monson, of Paris, and used at present as an apartment house. According to the new book, a lease of 1815 describes it as "the old stone house on the square with kitchen, stables, etc., and two partitions to run across the ball room."

The house has been commonly known in Paris as the Burr property, having been purchased by the Burr family early in the nineteenth century, probably a few years following the lease of 1815. Mr. Monson, who purchased the property, has made extensive repairs on it, both inside and out. The old plaster was cleaned off and the exterior was resurfaced and painted red.

Governor Joseph Duncan, according to the record in the biography, entered the war of 1912 as an ensign in the 17th U. S. Infantry and remained in service throughout the war. A short time after the close of the war, a part of the family, including Joseph, moved to Illinois. A part of the Duncan family remained in Paris for which one of the city thoroughfares, Duncan avenue, is named. One of the descendants, Major Jere Duncan, was the great grandfather of Mr. Duncan Bell, a merchant of Paris at the present time.

LOOKING FOR WIGGINTON DESCENDANTS

Some weeks ago THE NEWS published a clipping from the Louisville Courier-Journal, in which it was stated that James W. Wigginton, of Chula Vista, Calif., was seeking to locate descendants of Henry Wigginton, who moved from Virginia to Bourbon county, in 1800, and further stating that he served in the Civil War.

THE NEWS learns that the Henry Wigginton referred to in the clipping left one son, John T. Wigginton, familiarly known in the early days of Paris as "Tee" Wigginton, who died in this city about forty years ago. Mr. Wigginton was possessed of a wonderful tenor voice, and was noted through the Bluegrass region as a musician of superior excellence. Mr. Wigginton left a son, Julian Wigginton, who is now a resident of Florida. The widow of Henry Wigginton married Richard S. Henderson, who for many years conducted a hotel in Paris, at the corner of Main and Fourth streets, the site of which is now occupied by the Peoples-Deposit Bank, and the storerooms of Frank & Co., and the Ardery Drug Co. Mr. Wigginton was not in the Civil War, but served in the war with Mexico, when the Kentucky troops made their record. Mrs. Henderson has a daughter, Mrs. Chester Croxton, formerly of Paris and Lexington, now residing in Texas. A nephew, Richard Hanson, formerly of Paris, is at present a resident of Lexington.

MARRIED LINCOLN'S PARENTS

A campaign for funds to erect a marker at the grave of Rev. Jesse Head, who united in marriage the parents of Abraham Lincoln, is being sponsored by the Harrodsburg, Ky., Chamber of Commerce and citizens everywhere are asked to contribute.

The remains of Rev. Mr. Head, Methodist preacher, justice and cabinet maker, lie in an unmarked grave in Cave Hill Cemetery, at Harrodsburg.

Only a few years ago the original return of the minister was found in the Washington county court house, whereas it should have been returned to the Hardin County Court Clerk at Elizabethtown.
